

The diagram illustrates the relationship between different page layout formats. It features three nested rectangular frames: a red outer frame, a blue middle frame, and a black inner frame. Three horizontal arrows point from the left towards these frames. The top arrow is black and points to the black frame. The middle arrow is red and points to the blue frame. The bottom arrow is blue and points to the red frame. Text labels are placed to the right of each arrow, explaining the meaning of each line.
